The Artist The end of a silent era.

In 1927, Hollywood's popular silent film star George Valentin (Dujardin) is posing outside the premiere of his latest film when a beautiful young woman accidentally bumps into him. Making light of the situation, he poses with her for the cameras, landing both their faces on the front page of Variety with the headline "Who's That Girl?"

The girl is Peppy Miller (Bejo), an unknown who later auditions for the role of a dancer at Kinograph Studios. When she captures the attention of Valentin, he convinces studio boss Al Zimmer (Goodman) to cast her in his next picture. Valentin begins to coach young Miller for her small role as an extra, and the chemistry between the two becomes obvious. Miller, with guidance from her mentor, slowly begins to attract much bigger roles.

As the era of silent films begins to draw to a close, Valentin struggles with the rising popularity of "talkies". His path drives him into the depths of oblivion, while Miller slowly climbs to the top of the talking film industry.

Director Michel Hazanavicius brings to life an era of film he has always admired, using a cast of both French and American actors. A spirited and charming romantic comedy, The Artist took only thirty-five days to shoot but has won a number of accolades at the 2011 Cannes Film Festival, 2012 Academy Awards and the 69th Annual Golden Globes. Whether it is the onscreen chemistry, a bit of escapism from modernity, or the nostalgia for the classic essence of film, The Artist is sure to be a film to remember.

Ahlam The Female Gulf Star

Fans call her “The Star of the Gulf” and according to famous Saudi singer Mohamad Abdo, she is an Arab superstar. Her name is Ahlam Al Shamsi and her powerful voice has captivated audiences in the Gulf and across the Arab world for years.

She was born in 1969 in Al Bsayteen village in Muharak, Bahrain. Growing up, she was musically influenced by her father and local artist, Ali Al Shamsi. At an early age, Ahlam began singing at weddings and ceremonies, where Kuwaiti music composer Anwar Abdullah first discovered her talent. She went on to sign a contract with Foonon Emarat Productions and Abdullah composed music for her debut album “Ahlam 95 (Ahebak Mot)”. With the success of her album, Ahlam produced 5 music videos.

In all, Ahlam has released ten albums with the latest being “Hatha Ana” in 2009. This album, which includes 14 songs ranging from classical to pop hits, has stayed at the top of the charts for 11 months.

Ahlam has been a regular guest at Arab music festivals, including Hala Febrayer and Febrayer Nights in Kuwait, the Arab Song Festival in Qatar, Muscat and Salala Khareef Festivals in Oman and other events in Bahrain. Her performance at the Jerash Festival for Culture and Arts in Jordan is still remembered today for catapulting her career and resonating with Jordanian audiences.

Recently, Ahlam joined the judging panel of the hit TV talent show, Arab Idol. Her presence attracted large audiences and left them eagerly awaiting the next season.
